

Inter Cars approved as new member of ADPA

Press release

Brussels, 12 March 2026 - Welcome to Inter Cars as a new member of ADPA - Automotive Data Publishers Association - and its first company originally from Poland.

Having access to complete and accurate spare parts identification information is essential for ensuring equipment reliability, minimizing downtime, and controlling maintenance costs. When parts are correctly identified, technicians can quickly source the right components, avoid installation errors, and prevent damage caused by using incompatible spare parts. Accurate information also improves inventory management and safety by reducing guesswork and delays, ultimately helping the independent aftermarket maintain smooth operations and extend the lifespan of vehicles.

By joining ADPA, Inter Cars helps ensuring that this essential information is duly and fully made available to the independent automotive aftermarket, contributing to its mission of ensuring the continuous safety, sustainability and affordability of road mobility in Europe.

Michael Pedersen, ADPA President, stated: “ADPA and Inter Cars share objectives and values: providing the repairers with the most accurate, reliable information enabling them to perform at best their job, improving both consumers’ experience and road mobility. We are looking forward exchanging with Inter Cars specifically on the issue of spare parts identification, and more generally on items of common interest for the independent automotive aftermarket.”

Momchil Kovachev, Chief Digital Officer at Inter Cars, added: “Inter Cars is committed to continue supporting the mission of the automotive repair and maintenance sector. Supporting ADPA in achieving adequate regulatory conditions for us to do our job is fully in line with this wider objective, and we are confident that joining ADPA will prove beneficial not only for our respective organisations, but also for the wider ecosystem.”
